William Castelan

10/24/2026

Troubleshooting Writeup:

I've identified the issue where there is a long-term problem with a slow PC. This problem is easily replicable, but nothing has changed recently. I've established my theory that there are too many startup applications. I tested my theory which is not correct as there are few applications with startup permissions. I used a new theory with a running application taking up too much CPU and I confirmed it using task manager. My plan of action is to immediately use task manager to close applications as it will not interfere with my work. I implemented my solution by closing Whatsapp, Mobile Devices, and Google chrome as they had high CPU usage. There is still full system functionality. For future reference, to fix slow performance, close all running applications that aren't being used.